India Speaks...

From sleepy, pro-partition lyallpur to the newly-minted capital of independent In Dia, Delhi, to the exciting shores of a brave new world, U.S.A. then back to the terra firma of Bharat, Gurcharan Das's life is an amazing story of eventful close-up's & long shots that unfailingly entertains, enlightens & empowers in one fell swoops. A Harvard graduate, the youngest ever CEO of Procter & Gamble, Author, Novelist, playwright & Columnist of repute, Das however maintain the hotline with business & Industry through his Management Consultancy. In this engaging one-on-one with STRATEGIC INNOVATORS, the multi-dimensional moverick, forever championing the cause of a resurgent India with all the passion, conviction & erudition at his command, traces the sign cant signposts of his life, as only a rivetting, true-blue ranconteur can.

o Gurchall's grandfather, the English language is a treasured possession.

As a chief the was initially confused by his good father's strange attachment to breign language but later realised, it was his word down to the world-the many-coloured kaleidoscope through which he read & heard about events that unfolded in the world he lived in. Gurcharan's father was in the deathless phrase of the author of the Punjabi Century, Prakash Tandon – a "cultural commuter." During the day, his father was an engineer who wore western clothes, spoke in English & followed the rational, individualistic life of a responsible & committed official of the British raj.

In the evening however he wore a loose-fitting kurta, spoke in Punjabi, ate Indian food, listened to Indian music & meditated like a good hindu. While Gurcharan's mother made sure that the children worked hard at their studies & got good marks, especially in English & Mathematics. As Gurcharan Das recounts, "...after homework every evening before dinner, she would sit with us & regale us with stories from the Ramayana & Mahabharata. Her narration was deeply coloured by her middle class values which emphasized the virtues of thrift, hard work, integrity, courage & respect for elders. My father, for his turn, fostered in us the love of god, respect for the Guru, the value of meditation & spiritual enlightenment."

After partition, Gurcharan's family shifted to Simla where his schooling began. Soon after the family moved to Delhi where he was admitted to Modern School (Barakhamba Road) as his mother (whose relentless determination was totally responsible in getting the children admitted against all odds) was convinced that the school provided the perfect blend of modern & traditional values necessary for a good, solid education. After the stinct in Delhi, the family now moved, this time, to a brave new world - the United States of America, where they were located in Washington D.C. America in the fifties, (under Eisenhower) was on a roll & enjoying unprecedented levels of prosperity. The American middle-class appeared singly-mindedly committed to both, live the American dream & pursue the slogan 'big is beautiful' in every facet touching their life-homes, automobiles, gadgets the works! It was truly a sort of a culture shock for people like the newly moved in family of Gurcharan Das. In time, Gurcharn Das was admitted to a typical American school where interestingly when he joined, the school had eighty percent "white" but when he left three years later, it had become eighty percent "black"! Right in front, he witnessed a demographic revolution with the destruction of the American city & the birth of a flourishing suburbia.

Like many American kids, Gurcharan soon got a job delivering newspapers before school. Each morning, he would walk his route from house-to-house starting five in the morning-come hail, rain, snow, anything! Frequently it was bitterly cold & it required real will power, but since he knew his customers depended on him, he couldn't let them down-even if they didn't always pay on time! This small job taught him the bigest secret of business as he explains, "...my paper boy stint taught me on crucial lesson- 'Customer is the King'. No matter how big & hot you are, the customer is always central to all your activity. If you don't satisfy him, there is no customer. Without a customer there is no business- & no job! The other major thing to fear technology. At sobot is no business- ω ... learnt was not to fear technology. At school, we all a class called 'SHOP'. The $\omega_{\rm a}$ learnt was not to the class called 'SHOP'. The $class_{TOoly}$ with lathes, tools & machine. would be fined were taught to work with our hands, Very $_{800\eta}_{\text{We}}$ window, make a table learnt to repair a window, make a table or unclos a sink, Suddenly tackling, coping or working with machines was not such a big deal! We understood what Bronowski meant when he declared that the world is understood through the hand not the mind & that the hand is the real cutting edge of the mind." Three years later, the family was due to return back home. India, but since Gurcharn was in his final year, his parents agreed to let him stay behind. Six months later as he was getting ready to head for India, he was happily surprised to $|e_{ath}|$ that he had won a scholarship to Harvard University.

While remembering his Harvard days, he says, "Today when Hook back, my most vivid memories of Harvard temain ones that deal with ideas, Persons – even in eminent ones- come second. One of the first cleas I encountered there was that the 'Nation' war a relatively new concept in human history although countries had existed for a long long time. I so realized that the U.S.A. was the nation, the country where the $_{\mbox{\scriptsize no}}$ first truly med had originated. For the first time, tion of moder a people had ciously, in collective fashion, a nation without the baggage decided to be America 'did not have a past' of history, be The Americanalso unique because they only He continues, "We may have lived for the got our idea reading a nation via England but the inspiration clearly American. The other this. ! I was caught up in a big was Harvard was the future of poor tries, something even the grin my economists seemed hopeful mt. There was a cr called Develops Economics, while tried to capture their hopes. Pa

Rosenstain-Ro

dan & Ragnar

Nurke was the gurus

mantra.

of this new

One of our liberal heroes

policy to provide the content of the second state of the second st property of the source approaches to the source approaches the source approaches the source approaches. the proposition the sound represent the second recommendation of the second representation of the second recommendation of the secon ра изгор разона разоная спинциянения горология, жи податого разоная Отогования The Approve society Consciences The for Approximate the new hore ment has reflectively as he had been a hore than a final security. Secretarially I found bein a band tempher orbooperation thereto in class & didn't march care authority thereto eventuenties more march care Application of the state of the of distance communities & therethe being on to or analysis travered like all undergrads I read with travers & Mill & gen traft read west to Highes & Mill & get trely remed on the principles of preference John Rama. professor John Rawls was the antihull influence in those early years. His five hills fire as Fairness' created huge of participating into a book called, A 79. paper paper the n book called, A Theory of which transformed the debase which transformed the debate on equality, arity of the role of the state. His selection went tribute to Harvard's ability 8 right tribute to Harvard's ability to take risks dignal tribute to Harvard's ability to take risks but potential greats. I have found with unfair & frustrating that Indian intellectu-and. unfair & frustrating that Indian intellectuold, difficial leaders are so Anti-American that we have to perceive the arms. A POINT Unable to perceive the good qualities of the are unable ducational systems the American educational systems, which, despite remains fairer & more remains American Das while specific than most as Gurcharan Das while specific Gurcharan Das while studying in Harvard of the great things about an American felt that one of the great that allowed elt that allowed an under the freedom of any the enjoy the freedom of exploring subjects of choice. In his junior years to end to choice. In his junior years, for example, their own choice to Harvard's wall beautiful to Harvard's wall their own to Harvard's well-known Sanskrit he was which had produced the great "Harvard department which had produced the great "Harvard oriental Serves", consisting of more than a hundred Orderna of Sanskrit scholarships & translations by of the worlds leading Scholars. There was Henry Kissinger too! He wasn't so famous then but he was protosocietor charg & dense large midberrie for his leveryon the cought the purcount of northernal salf thispension & compliantees it were the only legitimine compare for a station in its relation with either count types. There was no room for morally or alternion. he ecould repeat concluding that it was dangerous to ben querament in besoich

thi

After graduuring from Fluvard, disse diffigi happened in Curcharan Das. First, he was insamely homesick, returnin is guinne scattentics despite several scholarships & completely confused about the favore. However, he couldn't return empty Nanded home. He started to desperately settle out ferrers to American companies for an opening in their Indian subsidiaries. He had sent dissens but only one replied. It was VICRS, the makers of vapourub. After several interviews in New York, the General Manager of the Indian subsidiary Richardson Hindustan (who was on a trip to the big apple) offered Gurcharn a job as an Executive-trainee He explained that the company was comparatively new in India, so this was his chance to get in on the ground floor. Soon, he found himself in Mumbai. From being accused of being a Smart Alec "who asks too many unnecessary questions & should go" to harbouring a complex because he was working for a company that was both miniscule & unknown (compared to other towering multinational banners) to slowly finding his feet, discovering the complex & fascinating world of "Bazar Power" in the little known alleys of Bharat through the native genius of unsung traders & shop-keepers, to swinging deals, breaking barriers, building bridge & learning each day with humility & hunger was truly an eye-opener on several levels for this Harvard graduated executive. Ultimately it dealt with

Chronology

Gurcharan Das is an author and a management consultant. He advises a number of companies on

- He was Chairman and Managing Director of Richardson Hindustan Limited from 1981 to global corporate strategy. 1985, the company where he started as a trainee.
- He was CEO, Procter & Gamble India from 1985 to 1992.
- Between 1989-1992, he was Vice President, Procter & Gamble Far East.
- In 1992, he was promoted to Vice President & Managing Director, Procter & Gamble World
- In 1995, after a 30-year career in 6 countries, he took early retirement to become an author. Author of the international bestseller, India Unbound, which have been published in many
- languages and filmed by the BBC. He regularly writes column for the Times of India and
- His noted novel, A Fine Family which was published by Penguin being made into a film by Sham Benegal.

Harvard for me was as much a celebration of new & exciting ideas as an introduction to some unique thought leaders human relations-through the transaction of goods & services-spanning the entire gamus of creating a desire & fulfilling it, with total customer satisfaction, bringing into play lessons learnt in those yearly years as a paperwallah in Washington DC. At the end of the day, Gurcharan realized that the real key to success is the sum total of a tremendous amount of local passion for the brand & a feeling of local pride & ownership. As he states, "Real Globalization is about having a global vision & strategy but also cultivaring roots & individual identities, nourishing local insights and re-employing communicable idea in new geographies around the world. Re-enforced by a relentless one-pointedness towards a goal. The best managers do very few things but they make sure they do the right things, execute them brilliantly & most importantly have fun doing it."

At age 20, I knew I was going to write Gurcharan Das from the beginning knew that he is going to write as he tells, "The day I left college, I knew I was going to write. Maybe there was no big picture in terms of what for whom, powered by what kind of an agenda & with what desired impact, but at age twenty, only the stirrings happen, only the symptoms are visible. The disease comes later! I remember investing in a Diary & diligently noting the happenings of each given day. Later In my working life at Procter & Gamble, there was a huge amount of traveling that I had to do frequently criss-crossing across the length & breadth of the land. Many small towns featured where there was not very much to do in the evenings. I read voraciously all through those years. At one point, I recroned-gathering courage, It was playback time. I wrote three plays in my twenties, a novel in my thirties & the last one in my fifties. All my plays have been performed & appreciated at home & abroad. I am presently onto my new book (which takes most of my time) which deals with moral philosophy & how it is hugely relevant & can meaningfully impact today's public & corporate Movernance of the fifty, Gurcharn sought voluntary results to the fifty for the first terms of the first t ly impact toung a partition of the parti At Age fifty, comment from Procter & Gamble & persuaded his wife means and holiday. ment from Process, to accompany him for an Academic holiday his wife to accompany him for an Academic holiday his wife ancient Indian Chic have given too much importance to Meaulay & log have given up that needed to be rectified. Also, its helieved that lessons learnt from the Mahahharag believed toni is a part from the angle of the state of th Upanishads to the state of the beauty of depth & dimension they offered a Mer writing books, plays, columns, today Gurcharan Das's routine is simple. He comes to hisstudy at Das's routing agent white till around twelve. thirty in the afternoon, after which he goes for a swim. He returns home, have his lunch, read the papers & attend to his other non-literary work, that includes be in touch with companies where he is on the board , consult with some companies, d_0 lectures & talks for Corporates, write a column for a mainline publication & so on. Gurcharan Das is a perfect time manager as he tells us, "I have discov ered that time usuagement is of critical importance if you wish to do all that you wish to do, Also th degree of passion & conviction. imporatnat is a cles (for example) primarily All my books 8 ont affect India because India is deal with issu-Gurcharan Das is sometimes my prime pass nalist. But he does not feel that referred to asterm for him because a good journalist is ti ist is someone who is informed professional | & dispassionate. He thinks of objective, anal in Advocate, championing a himself as me purpose & resolve beyond the cause with par y & certainly very hot 'n' heavy call of legition on opinions! "" often comment on the lack of cynicism in deles & books- a leit motif in a lot of prevalent alise - & an ever-shining sign of positivism & ...sm. That comes largely from my business b. and. You cannot hope to be a significant play. reader of any organization in business or inde you are constantly moaning, groaning & iaining about how the glass is always half emp The dynamic personality as he is, loves to be a or & shaker, forward looking & a chronic optimi cever celebrating infectiously, the joy of the half glass. Life is about hope. It is heavens greater and it to us mortals. The Page of Excellence' salutes CarcharnDas for his approach and hopes that some day the whole of India can realize the flamboy nuce and the joy associated with the half full glass. Cheers!